Have done two projects and working on a third. First was my first jewelry box for my granddaughter - oak, wenge, walnut and cherry. Then I found a totally intact 50-year-old Delta turret radial arm saw in Paso Robles. My son is a fireman there for the city, so on a visit to him I bought it and spent the winter totally rehabbing it. My current project is rebuilding an old wagon wheel for a friend. It's a wheel off a covered wagon that his ancestors came to Calif on it. It will be a yard decoration (it's heavy, approx. 150 lbs.

I am learning new things to do with my scroll saw. I found compound cut patterns for some candlesticks online. Fun to make. I think we're ready for the next power outage

I was elected last October as the Chair for our new Parish Council and therefore needed a gavel.

So, here is what I made. The handle is walnut and the head is Live Oak

One of the projects I worked on during the Shelter in Place time is this Cherry Side Table from a single board. In addition to the usual machine processes, I incorporated some hand tool use.

The half blind dovetails were done by hand. The curve on the table aprons were created with a spokeshave. The rounded edge on the top was done with a block plane. The drawer pull was done on the lathe.
