Scroll Saw Portraits

I decided to try doing portraits on the scroll saw. I had seen some of them online. It seemed like a fun way to combine my interest in photo image manipulation with wood working. My first attempt, included here, was from a picture I took of my wife Bev in 1974. I really like how it turned out. I have since tried a couple more images. Total failures! Embarrassingly so. I have learned that these things can be really hard to do well. I think I got really lucky with the first one. I haven't given up on doing more, but now I know how difficult it will be.

GEORGE ALEXANDER

Here a few of the projects I worked on this past year while sheltering in place...

I built a wedding keepsake box for the daughter of good friends. The top and bottom is Sapele and the sides are Western Maple. I used a homemade box joint jig on the table saw for the joinery. The corners are a four-corner match. The laser lettering was done by Jason at the Woodshed.

With help from Roger McCoy, I made two spoke shaves from Sapele. Actually, there were a couple of practice ones from Poplar in order to perfect a feathery shaving. The box was made to gift one to a good friend.

This is one of the many boxes I built. We have boxes in every room in the house. The box is Sapele and the tray is poplar. The sides are a four-corner match and the corner keyed miter joints.

George Alexander – Mobil bases

I have two adjustable mobile machine bases that have been collecting dust that I want to get rid of. One measures 18 x 24 and the other 15 x 22. I would be happy to part with them for donation to the club treasury. I can be contacted with my cell (559) 313-1286 or email. Thanks...

Matt Tucker – RBI Hawk Scroll Saw

RBI Hawk Scroll Saw

My Father passed last year and I've gotten most of his tools. I find myself owning two scroll saws as part of the process. I already have one that I'm used to and have no need of the second. I'm also tired of storing it, so I was wondering if anyone in your club might be interested in purchasing it. I'd be willing to sell it to a club member for $600 if one is interested. If not, I'll continue to store it. Feel free to have anyone interested contact me who is interested. Thank you!
